GARFIELD TALKS OF HAWAII TRIP

He Says Everything Is Prosperous And
People Happy

San Francisco, July 7.—"The islands are thoroughly American, and the American spirit is particularly strong," said Secretary Garfield as a prelude to his further remarks, and this point seemed to impress itself more strongly upon him than any other observation made during his trip. Continuing, he said:

"I spent about two weeks in the islands, and they were a very busy two weeks. I traveled nearly all the time, and visited most of the islands. I found everything in excellent shape.
The people are happy and prosperous, attached to the territorial government and to the parent Government in this country."

"Of course, I made a special study of the matters that come within the purview of my department. I observed the operation of the pure-food law and was impressed by the favor with which it has been received by the people. I found the lighthouse system in successful operation, and have but few recommendations to make with respect to it."

"My attention was called to the success of the sugar and coffee industries in the islands, and I could not help but observe the general prosperity of the people."

"Regarding the political affairs of the islands, I can say very little. The Territorial Legislature does not meet for some months, and consequently politics is being given little attention by any of the classes."

"I am happy to say that there is no race agitation in the islands. The different races are living in the utmost harmony, and the prospect that they will continue to do so could not be better."
